“This collaboration with the French jeweller Tournaire opens a new artistic era where the precision of our cooking ranges merges with the refined creativity of these bronze inlays. Together, we push the boundaries of aesthetics and exceptional craftsmanship, offering our customers a sensory experience that combines a passion for gastronomy with the timeless elegance of jewelry.”

Maison La Cornue

Entitled ‘La Vie’ (Life), this collection of bas-relief sculptures, which enhances the Château cookers, celebrates the simple pleasures of everyday life. Each piece is an ode to the benefits of Mother Earth, and embraces the joy of living: a scene of happiness shared over a tasty meal, a family gathering or a moment of relaxation.

The sculptures are crafted in an elegant and refined antique style, using the ancestral technique of lost-wax casting. The treatment of the characters, with each detail meticulously worked, highlights the expressions and gestures to create emotion-filled scene.

Each of the distinctive elements of our Château line has been sculpted:

- snail-shaped knob
- brackets
- handles
- trims
- hood brand plate
- handrail end caps

The union of two French Maisons labeled EPV (Living Heritage Companies) illustrates their respective commitment to innovative and meaningful craftsmanship.

Maisons La Cornue & Tournaire share more than fundamental values such as excellence, transmission of know-how, or even requirement and quality; they are driven by the passion for the gesture that leads to the exceptional.

“We bring an artistic touch to La Cornue cooking ranges by sculpting antique motifs on bronze elements. Just as in our jewellery creations, each scene tells a story celebrating the conviviality that cooking and meals offer, allowing us to savour life.”

Mathieu Tournaire

Maison Tournaire, founded half a century ago by Philippe Tournaire, embodies French jewellery excellence. Over the generations, this heritage has given birth to unique and iconic pieces of jewellery.

In their workshops in the Loire region, a team of experts combines ancestral know-how with cutting-edge technology, producing jewellery of unrivalled quality, from design to production.
